"MAN OF THE HOUR" BY CRACK AMATEURS

The preparations for the production of "The Man of the Hour," on July 16, 17 and 21, have been completed and the way in which the local people came in for tickets when the sale was opened at Wall, Nichols Co. is very evident that the good reports which were made on the show when it was seen at the Opera House before will have their effect and that those who failed to take advantage of the opportunity then will not miss the chance now.

The presence of the officers of the fleet at the Opera House will mean that the three nights of the "Man of the Hour" will be quite in the light of society functions and already several orders for six or more seats for box parties have been received. There will be many dinners given while the fleet is in port, with the officers from the battleships as guests, and these will be followed by a visit to the Opera House in many instances.

Mrs. Nellie McLean, Mrs. Webb and Mrs. McClellan, who take the ladies' portion of the show in their hands, are enough in themselves to be an attraction. Few professional companies are able to get together such an aggregation as that which will play on next Thursday and Friday and the following Tuesday at the Opera House. The prices will be 75, 50 and 25 cents.

His Panama Merry Widow

LOST FINE HAT WHEN HIS WIFE NEEDED ONE OF THOSE NEW ONES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 13.

Mrs. Geo. J. Kennedy of Ashland Heights, West Manayunk, wanted the real thing in a Merry Widow hat, so she annexed an expensive Panama, which her husband bought in Cuba. She had the hat dyed a brilliant red and then trimmed it gorgeously with flowers, feathers, ribbons, and what-not. Out West Manayunk way it was the subject of envious gossip.

Mr. Kennedy had occasion to go to New York and he made up his mind to wear his Panama. He hunted high and low for it, but could not find it. Finally, in despair, he asked his wife if she had seen it. Then she confessed.

Realizing that he had lost his hat Kennedy also lost his temper. In a huff he hurried to the office of Magistrate Grella in Manayunk and wanted a warrant so that he could have his wife arrested on the charge of larceny. The magistrate was not in, so Kennedy told his trouble to Constable Lowenthal. He was told that Ashland Heights was in Montgomery County and therefore out of Magistrate Grella's jurisdiction. Kennedy started to leave to hunt up a Montgomery County magistrate when Lowenthal prevailed upon him to think twice before he leaped.

"If you look at this thing in the way I do," said the wily Lowenthal, "you will be convinced that you have saved money. You say the hat is three years old. Very well. Your wife, by appropriating a 3-year-old hat, has saved you the price of a new Merry Widow. They are expensive and you have saved money on the deal."

This line of argument convinced Kennedy and he left with his mind made up not to have his wife arrested.

George Odom is making as many autumnal stake dates for France as he can. He put her in several Saratoga 2-year-old races which closed a short time ago, and it is his intention to engage her later in the summer in the Great Eastern and Nursery handicaps and the Flatbush and Champagne stakes.

For Peace Of Europe

ENGLAND, FRANCE, AND RUSSIA GETTING TOGETHER IN APPROVED STYLE

LONDON, England, June 13.

That international events tend strongly to the formal creation of a triple alliance, including England, France, and Russia, is the inference publicly drawn from the Reval reunion even in the most reserved German quarters. But in none of the countries directly concerned are the extremists able to force the pace.

M. Clemenceau's theory is set forth in the Aurora: "Let us not talk of an alliance at present. Like the entente between France and England, an alliance of larger possibility and greater numbers will come in its own time."

M. Pichon, French Foreign Minister, points out: "Our entente with England and our alliance with Russia are now definite features of the policy of the three countries and other developments may be left to natural evolution."

King Edward's ambition is to crown his reign with an Anglo-French-Russian agreement with definite aims. This does not contemplate in its early operations anything more than the clearing up of it. The initial purposes are not all controversies among the parties anti-German.

Whether the arriere pensee of the British royal diplomatist is isolation of Germany is a question as to which Downing street is divided, but the Vistula Zeitung expresses a sensible German judgment when it remarks: "We have broken ourselves of the habit of seeing a peril to our own safety in every international combination."

Germany would feel alarmed if the British advocates of conscription should gain ground rapidly.

M. Fallieres will go to Russian waters July 27 to meet the Czar, who probably will visit London and Paris in the autumn.

Johnson's Lost Cause

COL. WATTERSON EXPLAINS HOW BRYAN GOT THERE EARLY

Chicago, June 9.—"The cardinal rule of the Democracy is the rule of the majority," declared Colonel Henry Watterson today, and to that epigram expressing his opinion of the present candidacy of Governor Johnson, whom he first brought forward for the Presidential nomination more than a year ago, the Kentucky Colonel added his prediction that Bryan will be nominated at Denver by the Democrats next month upon the first ballot and by acclamation.

"Johnson's cause is a lost cause," said Colonel Watterson. "He is the victim of procrastination. When Bryan said in a speech a year and a half ago that he would step aside if shown a candidate who could offer more chances of making a race promising greater success I took him at his word and named Governor Johnson, but the introduction of the Minnesota Governor into the Presidential arena fell flat as a stale buckwheat cake. There was nothing doing."

The Colonel also added that Bryan had a fighting chance for victory.
